SUPREME COURT DENIES REVIEW OF ESTATE CASE

Williams Property to Be Divided According to Will of Last Survivor

OVER $100,000 INVOLVED

Decision of Appeals Court Sustained After Reversing Judge Adkins

The Ohio Supreme court today refused to admit for review the appeal of Alice Ward, and others, to set aside a will of Sarah E. Williams, which involves 900 acres of land in Pickaway-co and considerable other property.

The estate is valued over $100,000.

A. J. Williams, Mary E. Williams and Sarah E. Williams, all owners of the land, made an agreement in 1886 to hold the land until the death of the last member of the family, at which time the property was to be divided according to a pre-determined plan.

The suit, begun in the Pickaway-co common pleas court, alleged that Sarah E. Williams, prior to her death, had destroyed one copy of the aged agreement, and had deeded the property to Job R. Renick, and others, in violation of the original property distribution agreement.

Judge Joseph W. Adkins held in favor of the Wards, ruling that a valid contract was executed as to the property distribution, while the appellate court reversed the finding in favor of Renick. The high court's decision upheld Renick's claim for the lands by overruling the review motion.

Workers reported it was the first trouble they had experienced with loose earth in the extensive sewer program.

ROTARY ELECTS NEW OFFICERS; FRENCH SPEAKS

Karl Herrmann Named to Take Reigns from May; Wallace is Vice President

Rotarians, Thursday noon, elected Karl J. Herrmann, N. Washington-st., as president to succeed Charles H. May. The installation date has not been announced.

Other officers named at the meeting held in the American Hotel Coffee shop were: vice president, W. E. Wallace; secretary, C. T. Gilmore; treasurer, John A. Ryan; directors, Ray Rowland and Dr. E. S. Shaw.

Safety Director Harry E. French of Columbus spoke on the annual cost of crime to the nation. Mr. French, former police chief, is well-versed on prevention of crime and his address was pleasing to the club members.

He declared crime costs the nation as much annually as a war would cost. He said that most crime originated in the home, and that modern parents do not rear their children as parents of years gone by, but just provide a place for them to stay.

"Home environment," Mr. French said, "is the most important factor in the prevention of crime."

He was accompanied to Circleville by Police Chief John Dunn and Fire Chief Edward Welch.

ETHIOPIA READY TO CLOSE LONG AFRICAN REIGN

Arrival of Italian Army Awaited as Warriors Make Final Defense

GENERAL EXODUS ON

All Foreigners Ready to Seek Shelter in Britain's Wired Compound

ADDIS ABABA, April 23.—(UP)—Ethiopia's warriors made a desperate last stand today while people here awaited the breakup of an empire that had endured in mountain isolation since Biblical times.

Ras Nassibu, in the east; Crown Prince Asfa Wosen's army north-east of Addis Ababa, and the Emperor Haile Selassie, reportedly in the area west and northwest of Dessye, were opposing with the last of their men the final triumphant advance of the tanks, armored cars, artillery and infantry of Italy's "army of civilization."

In the country north of Dessye bandits ran wild. Warriors in the shattered armies of defeated chieftains roamed in tattered garments, destitute, through the mountains and plains, many of them with machine gun or shrapnel wounds festering in them.

Capital Bedlam Scene

Here in the capital old men, women and children were crowding the roads to the west, their homes broken up, the able bodied men at the front, without hope of ever reforming their little families.

Rich merchants strapped bags of silver from the banks in the saddle bags on their mules and, surrounded by their armed retainers, made for safer places.

Foreigners began their exodus. Nearly all the foreign Red Cross units, their usefulness at an end because of the rapidity of the recent Italian advance and the blast of Italian airplane bombs, were here and ready to go.

The Belgian military mission which advised the emperor on his strategy and tactics has left for the coast.

Capt. John Meade, military attaché of the American legation, and John C. Robinson, Chicago negro, the emperor's star aviator since the beginning of the war, left on yesterday's train for Djibouti, French Somaliland.

Majority Leader William B. Bankhead, Ala., asserted that the bill was of "the utmost importance" and leaders agreed it should be given right-of-way.

He asked that members should not take up the house's time with irrelevant requests.

Democratic leaders expressed no apprehension over passage, despite Republican attacks and more than a score of amendments which will be offered by Democrats dissatisfied.

ROBERTSON CRAWLS FROM MINES SCADDING, WEAKER, IS CARRIED TO SAFETY BY DARING DIGGERS

Crowd at Mouth of Deep Hole Sings Hymn as Party Apepars, Silent as Magill's Body Is Brought to the Surface

MOOSE RIVER, N. S., April 23.—(UP)—C. A. Scadding, one of two Toronto men rescued from the Moose river gold mine cave-in, will be flown today to a Montreal hospital where his feet will be treated.

MOOSE RIVER, N. S., April 23.—(UP)—The freed from the underground prison where they endured 242 hours and 45 minutes of silence, darkness and torture rested in a rude hospital today. Physicians believe they would recover fully.

The hymn singing and cheering that accompanied their rescue after days of herculean labor by the rescue workers, had ceased so that they might rest. The physicians who examined them and then they were surprised by their good physical condition.

Herman Magill, their companion who died Sunday, succumbed to pneumonia, it was reported.

"Surprisingly Good"

Physically and mentally, the physicians said, Dr. D. E. Robertson, 65, is "excellent," Alfred Scadding, condition, they said, was "surprisingly good." His feet were cold, swollen and blistered. But this was not considered serious. The physicians did not anticipate complications.

Robertson and Scadding will be kept under observation here for a few days and then taken to Halifax.

The tragic drama of the Moose River gold mine ended at 12:44 a. m. (11:44 p. m. Wednesday, EST) when rescue workers brought Robertson, Toronto surgeon, to the surface. He was dirty, unshaven, so weak he could hardly stand on his feet. But he called out cheerily:

"Here comes Captain Bligh."

Two minutes later, his living companion, Scadding, was brought to the mouth of the Reynolds shaft where the rescue workers had been working under the most dangerous conditions since early Monday. He was weaker than Robertson, but he grinned and waved at the onlookers.

They were taken to a hospital set up in the one room mine office. The rescue workers—coal and gold miners recruited from the countryside, and government officials—suddenly began cheering and many wept. A Salvation Army worker began a hymn and the crowd joined in.

Magill's Body Removed

Then more rescuers appeared in the mouth of the shaft. They carried a blanket-covered stretcher. Beneath the blankets was the body of Magill, who was trapped 164 feet below the earth's surface with Robertson and Scadding on Easter Sunday, but couldn't endure as much and died a week later.

The crowd was silent as his body was carried past to a room in one of Moose River's 15 houses.

At 12:30 a. m. the rescue workers overcame the last of their obstacles, (they had tunneled through almost 100 feet of solid rock, slate, earth, and, finally, steel bars since Monday) and broke a narrow hole, barely large enough for a man to crawl through, into the tunnel prison.

Three draegermen, (trained mine rescuers), George Morrell, Jack Simpson, and Trueman Hirschfield, forced their bodies through the opening. The lights on their caps broke into deep shadows, gleamed on wet walls.

Two men were sprawled on the wet, stone floor of a ledge of the cavern. Eight feet behind them was a still form—Magill's body.

All Overcome

One of the men looked up at them, grinning through a heavy and dirty beard.

"Christ," he exclaimed loudly, "but I am glad to see you."

That was Robertson. Hirschfield was so overcome that he laughed.

"Doctor, I'm sure glad to see you," he said. The light hurt Scadding's eyes and he began to cry.

Both were so weak they couldn't stand, nor could they lie comfortably on the floor.

WEST RUMORED
AS SUCCESSOR
TO LOUIS HOWE

Former Ohio Congressman
Expected to Become
President's Secretary

WASHINGTON, April 23—(UP)—The name of Charles West, undersecretary of the interior and former Ohio congressman, was being mentioned in new deal circles today as a possible successor to late Louis McHenry Howe, President Roosevelt's secretary.

The position pays $10,000 a year and is considered the most influential of any appointive office in Washington.

During the last year, Howe's illness forced the president to distribute his secretarial duties among other members of the White House staff. A part fell to West, then attached to the Federal Credit Administration. He became Roosevelt "contact man" in the halls of congress.

West was so successful he was taken into the president's full confidence. Even after he became undersecretary of the interior, West continued in his contact role.

It was believed the president might wait several months before naming Howe's successor.

Republicans Ready For Cleveland Convention

Snell to Be Permanent Chairman; Bolton and Jappe to Assist in Arrangements for June 9 Confab

CLEVELAND, April 23—(UP)—The Republican party today had perfected its machinery for its national nominating convention here, starting June 9.

The choice of U. S. Senator Frederick C. Steiwer of Oregon as keynote speaker and temporary chairman was followed by the recommendation of Congressman Bertrand Snell of New York, minority floor leader in the house, for the permanent convention chairmanship.

The choice of Snell, ardent anti-new dealer and experienced in convention procedure, was seen by political observers as a move to balance the far western choice of Senator Steiwer.

Completing two days of preliminary work on the convention, the committee on arrangements headed homeward today, leaving the remainder of the pre-convention work to Ralph Williams, vice chairman of the committee, who remains here.

Congressman Chester C. Bolton, chairman of the Cleveland committee on arrangements, and James L. E. Jappe, secretary, will assist Williams.

On June 2, the national committee will again meet here to pass on final details.

Snell was permanent chairman of the Chicago Republican convention in 1932 and was a delegate to the Chicago conventions in 1916 and 1920, the Cleveland convention in 1924, and the Kansas City convention in 1928.

He is 65 years old and has been in the house 22 years.

In announcing the recommendation of Snell, Chairman Henry P. Fletcher also made public the following appointments:

Parliamentarian, John Q. Tilson of Connecticut; assistant, Lehr Fess, son of the former Ohio senator; sergeant-at-arms, Maj. Robert E. O'Connor of West Virginia; first assistant, Samuel Lewis of Pennsylvania; second assistant, George Kinsley of Ohio; sergeant-at-arms for the press, Lee Nickson of Indiana; official reporter, George L. Hart of Washington, D. C.

COURT'S RULING

Personal Property Tax Collection Involved

COLUMBUS, April 23—(UP)—The Ohio Supreme court today refused to review a decision of lower courts in overruling the method adopted by the state tax commission in fixing personal property taxes, and by its action set a legal precedent which may cost Ohio subdivisions millions of dollars.

The court, by refusing tax commission attorneys a hearing, upheld a decision of the Lucas county common pleas court in reducing a personal property tax assessment against the Surface Construction Co., Toledo, from $203,650 to $84,243.

The tax commission had made a total assessment against the company of $203,656, by basing its valuation of personal properties on the replacement cost of furniture and machinery less depreciation. The common pleas court cut the assessment to $84,243, by ruling that the valuation should have been based on the market value of the property as second-hand property.

Carlton S. Dargusch, vice-chairman of the state tax commission, estimated today that the refusal by the high court to review the decision will mean a loss of "millions of dollars" to local subdivisions which receive personal property tax revenues.

The commission has collected personal property taxes in the present method for several years, Dargusch said.

years of American occupation the islands and their people remain just as they were.
Captain Otto C. Dowling, Governor General of the islands, finds the situation quite discouraging. The natives, he says, take little interest in work or in public affairs and "practically decline to make any plans for the future." The experimental saw mill and also the agricultural school have been abandoned. Not a single board was turned out by a native in the saw mill and the hard work of farming had little appeal.

However, the captain makes the very significant statement that the natives "are happy and contented and are now enjoying luxuries of a year of prosperity." A happy and contented people, we believe, is the objective of constant human endeavor and seldom is achieved, regardless of the striving.

If the natives of the South Sea Islands
have succeeded in attaining that alluring end without reaping or spinning or gathering into barns or turning out boards from a lumber mill, they have indeed chosen the better part. After all, why not let them just be themselves and live their lives in accordance with their own primitive ideas as to what is important and worthwhile?

NO LONGER SOUGHT

IT SEEMS that two young buffaloes arrived in a Mid-West stockyard the other day and went begging on the market. They were not regarded as a "good meat buy" by the butchers thereabouts.
Now what, one wonders, is the matter with buffalo? Why shouldn't the two in the carload of cattle have been bought quickly, and transferred to the butcher's block?

Well, it further seems that it's a long story, involving the history of the buffalo, and its changing status as a food.

It was the buffalo which made trouble with the Indian in this middle-western area. The buffalo which ranged the land —north in the spring through what now is Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Nebraska and the Dakotas, and south in the fall—that animal spelled life for the Indians. It provided food, clothing, tepee, rawhide for

FEW TO JOIN SOIL PROGRAM

WASHINGTON — Confidential reports from field agents of the new farm program
have been far from encouraging.

From California, for instance, came an account of a meeting of the State AAA Director with county agents, to obtain firsthand information regarding the number of farmers expected to join in the soil conservation plan.

"Now men," said the Director, "you know what this program is; also you have talked to the farmers. I want you each to join down for me the number of farmers
in your area that you are sure will comply."

The answers revealed that out of 170,- 000 California farmers eligible to participate, only 13,000 were definitely known to plan to take part in the new acreage reduction program.

THE COURT LAUGHED

The black-gowned Justices of the U. S.
Supreme Court, so solemn and forbidding on the bench, enjoy a good joke—even at the expense of one of their number.

Arguing a recent tax case before the Court, Robert Jackson, able young Assistant Attorney General, claimed that the Defendant had sought to evade the estate tax by transferring his property to relatives prior to his death.

Jackson held that the defendant's advanced years justified such a contention;
that he obviously had his demise in mind
when he gave away his wealth.

"But," snapped Justice McReynolds, a dour Scotsman, "didn't you read the opinion of the lower court? It is shown there that this man was a hale and hearty Scotsman in his seventies."

"Yes," Your Honor," shot back Jackson,
"that is exactly my point. He was a Scotsman. That is why I say he must have desired to transfer his fortune by making these 'gifts'."

The entire Court, including McReynolds,
broke into laughter.

NOTE—Jackson won the case; the Court agreed with his reasoning.

the bow—virtually everything the plains
Indian needed.

Then the white man came along with powder and lead and began killing merely for the hides, destroying for profit what the Indian had utilized for centuries for existence. Then's when the trouble began.
The reason the two young buffaloes were unsought is that after the buffalo herds were decimated, and after the day of the Longhorns which followed in from Mexico with their stringy beef, the plains gave way to the thoroughbred cattle.

It may sound like debunking a noble animal that has been glorified in song and story, but it might as well be told: Buffalo meat is tough.

A conservative is anybody whose blood pressure goes up twenty points when somebody says: "Let's change it."

Never tell a friend your troubles. He can't realize how bad they are, and you will hate him for being so dumb.

THE CAMDEN RUBY MURDER

by ADAM BLISS

READ THIS FIRST: Detective Keyes and Gary Maughan are solving the mysterious murder of Margalo Younger, an actress and old friend of Maughan. She was murdered with a needle-like instrument as she and Maughan sat in the home of Dow Van Every, a collector of rare jewels. Listening to his gruesome story of the famous Camden ruby's history, the actress had been wearing Van Every's ruby which he described as a "murder stone". Among those questioned by the detective were Maughan; Van Every; his young niece, Joyce, who lives with him; his fiancée, Allan Foster; Joyce's companion, Laura Randall, and a Mrs. Bruce, close friend of Van Every's. Another suspect is Roy Barrimore, close friend of the actress, who shot himself shortly after her death. Margalo's maid finds a duplicate Camden ruby among the effects of her dead mistress which, however, proves to be a fake. Keyes interviews Manuel Gonzalez, a friend of Margalo's. Maughan runs into Laura Randall on the street who promises to have some important information for him the next morning. Van Every's ruby is found missing from his hiding place shortly before Miss Randall is found murdered in the cab in which Maughan had left her a few moments previously. The ruby is found among her clothes. The police question Maughan.

Even the taxi driver suspected me!

CHAPTER 28
VAN EVERY'S ruby gone. Stolen. The ruby around Miss Randall's neck. Could she have stolen it? It looked that way. Stolen it and worn it. The message she had left that she would have something to tell Keyes and me tomorrow.

"What time did you get to Sixty-ninth Street and Fifth?" I asked the cab driver.

"Well, I looked at my clock when we left you, because I was hungry and this was going to be my last trip until after dinner. It was quarter of 6 when I pulled away from the Warrington. It could not have been five minutes later when all this happened."

"And you say the lady called out to someone? Called 'Miss Joy'?"

"Right, boss. 'Miss Joy.' Kinda cried it out, like she saw somebody she knew, and wanted to attract her attention. You know how ladies scream out when they see a party they know. Kinda shrill and loud like."

"It was 'Miss Joyce', Laura Randall was calling," I muttered half to myself, half to my companion.

"Sounded like it. I thought it was 'Miss Joy', but it could have been 'Miss Joyce'. Gee, I hope these bulls come go now. I had my duty, and I'm hungry. Wife waiting home for me to eat. Supper'll get all cold."

I, too, wanted to get away. I knew it was useless until Keyes came. Van Every waiting for me, walking the floor probably, nervous, upset about his ruby. I wondered whether the steward guard in the blue coat would let me get to a phone. Looking at him again, I decided I wouldn't risk asking him. He was bound to refuse, for even now he was glowering at me angrily.

Miss Randall wearing the ruby. Had she stolen it? She must have. There wasn't a thing in the Van Every house she didn't know. When Soon and Van Every had hidden the ruby in what they thought was a safer place, it wasn't long before she knew where the place was. But why had she taken it—put it around her neck to wear it? Had it fascinated her, too? Plain, dowdy Laura Randall. Did she want to feel it around her neck as she walked? Want to see it glow on her bosom? Laura Randall stealing into Soon's room, taking the ruby from the idol, putting the old gold chain around her neck, fondling the ruby...

I could not reconcile it to tell me something. A secret in her eyes. Fool that I was? I should have drawn her out. She would have told. I think, if I had insisted, I might have saved her if I had known. At least now I could tell Van Every that I knew who had taken his ruby. He would not suspect Miss Randall. ... What had possessed her, anyway, stealing the ruby? Perhaps, though, she was only borrowing it—intending to return it.

The little woman calling out "Miss Joyce"—for Miss Joyce it must have been. What did that mean? Then an explanation occurred to me. I tried to force it out of my mind. It would not leave. Joyce could not be mixed up in this thing. Could not. Yet on the night when Margalo had been murdered Joyce was standing a moment in the open doorway. This evening, when Miss Randall had been murdered Joyce was near by. Near enough for Laura Randall to see her, call out to her. Was Joyce in another taxi? Or was she walking on the sidewalk, hurrying home, Gribble's store, I supposed, closed at 5:30, like other big city stores. Joyce would have time to walk to Fifth Avenue by 5:45—that is if the store closed at 5:30. But why should she walk to Fifth Avenue, when Gribble's was on Broadway, and the Van Every home could be reached much more quickly from Broadway than from Fifth? It might be that she had an engagement for dinner—a good excuse for coming to Fifth Avenue. When I had seen her in the afternoon she had been tired, but still rather happy—deploring the fact that she had to dance tonight with young Foster.

Two attendants were bringing in another body on a stretcher, dumping it carelessly on one of the slabs. I could hear their voices echoing through the stone morgue. Shuddering I sat there thinking of poor Miss Randall, of Van Every waiting for me to come, of Joyce and her errand on Fifth Avenue. It was senseless to think she had been walking, for in the rain and sleet and cold, Joyce would surely take a taxi. She would not carry the force of her job into her everyday life. She had been used to taking taxis. She would take one home when she finished work.

Joyce on the scene of Margalo's murder. Joyce there tonight, when Miss Randall was killed. Twice. Was it coincidence? I grew cold all over when I thought that I, too, had been present when Margalo died; I, too, had been near when Laura Randall was killed—the last to speak to her of them. The guard was glowering at me because he thought I had murdered Laura Randall! Even the taxi driver suspected me!

Keyes came in after I had waited what seemed hours. In reality it was only 20 minutes from the time the first officer had left me. He had been found in his favorite restaurant. "What's this?" he demanded. Without a word, my officer guard left me in company with only the taxi driver and led the captain to the slab where Miss Randall lay. When Keyes came back, he had the ruby in his hand.

"Come up to my office," he said, and all of us followed. When he was seated at the desk which was getting to be so familiar to me, he laid the jewel on a bit of white paper, and motioned me to talk.

"It's a mystery, Keyes. I don't know what to think," I began, hesi-

tantly.

"Start at the beginning. I understand you were in the fatal taxi with Laura Randall, and I want to know what happened."

"I was standing in front of the library, when she came along—she had come to get Joyce—you remember
I explained to you about Joyce?"
He nodded. "Miss Randall was excited, I thought—or perhaps it was because I was tired, I had walked a couple of miles in the rain. Anyway, she seemed excited and was chattering on about something, when I called a taxi for her. I wasn't going with her at first, then I thought I would, so I climbed in beside her.
She seemed to want to tell me something. Now I blame myself because I wasn't in the mood to listen. She was nervous, and kept looking at me strangely. Then she said to tell you she wanted to see both of us at 10 tomorrow. She emphasized the appointment. I remember asking her lately at last what she wanted, but then it was too late. She knew my mood, knew I probably didn't mean
what I said, so she told me nothing.
I reached the hotel and got out. The last words she said had something to do with the engagement tomorrow.
Something she had to tell us. I slammed the door, and stood a fraction of a second looking after the taxi. Immediately after I entered the hotel, I went to the desk, and found that Van Every had been calling me. When I finally got him on the phone in my room he told me that the ruby had been stolen. He was all upset."

"The ruby!" Keyes exclaimed.

"Yes, and he wanted to get hold of you right away. I promised him I'd do my best to find you, and called your office. I was just going out, when this officer," I pointed to my first guard, "and the taxi driver collared me and brought me to the morgue."

"Just what did Van Every say about the ruby?"

"I told him as best I could remember."

"When I had finished, he took the ruby once more in his hands. 'Looks like our little Miss Randall was the thief!'"

I admitted I was surprised when the morgue attendant had opened her coat, and I had seen the red stone.

Jerry Knox continued the story.
What he told Keyes was essentially what he told me. How Miss Randall had rapped on the glass and called out at Sixty-ninth Street, how a few moments later, he had noticed her on the floor, how he had come with the officer to the hotel to get me, thinking I would know what had happened.

Browned Pineapple Slices

Melt three tablespoons fat in a frying pan add six slices of canned pineapple and brown. Add one-half cup brown sugar, one-fourth teaspoon cloves and one teaspoon vinegar. Cover and simmer ten minutes, turning to allow even cooking.

Roast Beef Hash

Two and one-half cups meat, two and one-half cups boiled potatoes, one teaspoon diced onion (or omit), one and one-half cups water, two tablespoons butter or drippings, salt and pepper. Chop (do not grind) the meat. Add potatoes and chop again. Add onion, salt and pepper. Melt butter or drippings in skillet, add hash and water. Cook slowly for at least half an hour. Serve on platter, garnished with hard cooked egg slices and a few slices of green pepper. This is very rich and nourishing. This is a tasty way to finish the roast of beef.

Macaroni Loaf—Two cups cooked macaroni, one-half cup soft bread, one teaspoon chopped onions, one teaspoon chopped parsley, one-half cup cheese, cut fine; one-half teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon paprika, one-fourth teaspoon celery salt, two eggs or four yolks, one cup milk, two tablespoons fat, melted. Mix the ingredients and pour into buttered loaf pan. Bake 35 minutes in a moderately slow oven. Unmold and top with buttered asparagus.

The tests require two hours. Test scores are to be forwarded to the county school office not later than Monday, April 27.

CAPITAL POLICE TOLD TO ARREST CONG. ZIONCHECK

WASHINGTON, April 23—(UP)—Rep. Marion E. Zioncheck, D., Ohio, failed today to keep a purported promise to appear in police court on a 70-mile-an-hour speeding charge, and Judge Walter E. Casey ordered police to "bring him in bodily."

A writ of attachment was served on the Washington congressman yesterday after he failed to appear in court Tuesday as ordered. Sgt. George Hellmuth, who served the attachment, did not arrest Zioncheck immediately, however, taking instead the congressman's promise to appear voluntarily before Judge Casey today. When Zioncheck was an hour overdue, Judge Casey was informed that Zioncheck was in his office at the capitol and had defied the court in uncomplimentary terms in statements to reporters. Judge Casey made no comment, but ordered police to arrest him immediately and bring him bodily to court.

received orders from home to leave May 1.

Defense Futile
It was indicated that the definitive fight in the east was not over. Ras Massibu's men seemed to be awaiting the full shock of the Italian thrust, but without hope of doing more than retarding it.

On the Italian lines of communication well to the north the emperor's men were believed to be raiding in small groups where they could.

Out on the Dessye road, the road of which the emperor was so proud as part of his program of development, built over years by Swiss engineers at great cost, the Crown Prince's men were dynamiting long sections of the country's best highway, digging trenches across it 12 feet deep to trap tanks and armored cars, and posting machine guns on dominating peaks in hope that they could delay, if they could not stop, the advance of the invaders.

The doom of an empire that boasts it was founded by a son of the Queen of Sheba—whose country it was—and King Solomon, seemed plainly in sight. Americans and other foreigners here were ready, if necessary, to go to the British legation compound, three miles outside the city, guarded by a company of bearded sikh guards and barbed wire, bomb proofed, able to shelter from 2,000 to 3,000 people if necessary when the final breakup came.

fied with the bill as drawn by the house ways and means committee. Although house leaders and administration Democrats staunchly defended the bill, it lacked public approval of President Roosevelt, who asked for new revenue to meet extra-budget farm relief and soldiers' bonus costs.

Mr. Roosevelt, in his message after passage of the bonus over his veto and supreme court invalidation, asked for $517,000,000 to and $820,000,000 a year thereafter cover immediate farm relief costs to amortize the bonus and continue the farm program.

CANADA'S MINISTER OF MINES "ONE OF BOYS"

MOOSE RIVER, N. S., April 23.—(UP)—Until last week, the coal and gold miners of Nova Scotia thought of the large, red-faced, aggressive man who exercises governmental supervision over the provincial mines, as the Hon. Michael Dwyer, minister of mines. Today he was Mike Dwyer, one of the boys.

Provincial politicians predicted that Dwyer could be elected to any office he desired.

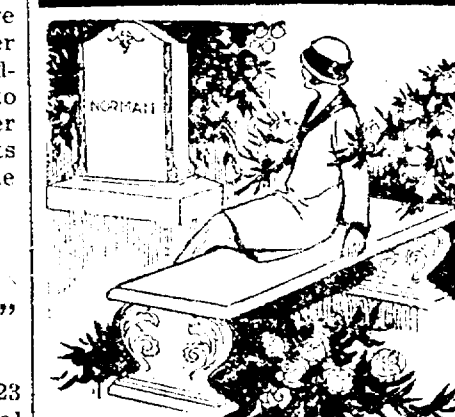

Last week, Dwyer was ill and abed in his home in Halifax. Disregarding his physicians advice, he came here, and dressed as a miner, worked like one. Since Monday he had been a regular member of one of the shifts that cleared out Reynolds shaft. On Monday he labored 20 hours, slept two hours, and returned to the diggings.

INDICTMENTS AGAINST COLUMBUS MAN NOLLED

Two indictments against James Schleppi, Columbus, charged with issuing checks without sufficient funds, were nolle in common pleas court Wednesday by Judge Joseph Adkins.

The indictments, returned in January, grew out of two checks issued to Charles Schleich, Williamsport.

Prosecutor Ray W. Davis said he recommended the indictments be nolle when he received information Schleppi on previous occasions had issued checks to Mr. Schleich, and asked they be held before being cashed.

GERMANY TESTS NEW ZEPPELIN IN MAY 5 TRIP

Hazardous North Atlantic
Journey Arranged; 60
Hours Expected

BERLIN, April 23—(UP)—Regular North Atlantic air service, visioned as dominating high speed travel between Europe and America within the next few years, will be brought nearer a reality when the Zeppelin Hindenburg makes a trial crossing early in May.

The scheduled trial flight probably will be followed by two more this summer. It is the forerunner of a regular German-American co-operative service, if plans can be realized and the menace
of North Atlantic gales overcome.
Airplanes may have a speed advantage. They may be in service on the safe route long before a regular Zeppelin service can be established. But according to Dr. Hugo Eckener, who knows more about regular flights than any man alive, airplanes may never be practical the year round
in the North Atlantic.

See Planes at Disadvantage

Even if they are, Zeppelin experts believe they can offer advantages in competition—roominess, comfort, carrying capacity and safety—which the planes cannot hope to match. They point to the dimensions and specifications of the new ship as proof.

The Hindenburg is 813 feet long,
only slightly shorter than the liner
Queen Mary, whom it will follow closely on a maiden trip to New York. It is capable, with the 7,500,000 cubic feet of gas space—
twice that of the Graf Zeppelin —of carrying 50 passengers, a crew of 40, and 20 tons of freight at a cruising speed of 80 miles an hour. The Hindenburg's cruising radius is 10,000 miles.

Four specially constructed Daimler Diesel motors, each developing 900 horsepower and turning a propeller 19 feet from tip to tip, drive the ship. The difficulty of developing these motors was one of the prime factors in the nearly year-long delay in the Hindenburg's maiden flight. Originally it was scheduled for July, 1935.

It is estimated the ship will require two and a half days for the flight to Lakehurst, N. J., from either Frankfurt or Friedrichshafen, and two days for the return flight. Prevailing westerly winds cause the difference.

Built With Two Decks

All accommodations are inside
the ship, only the snub-nosed pilot gondola, and the four motor gon-dolas project from the pump, streamed, silvery body. Two decks, within the framework, accommodate passengers and crew.

Along the keel on "B" deck, are the freight rooms and the crew's quarters, described as as comfortable as the passenger cabins of the "Graf." Above them, on "A" deck,
the passengers live in accommodations which entitle to ship to its name, "flying hotel."

Along the port side is the dining saloon, roughly 50 feet long, paralleled by a "promenade deck"
with huge windows looking outward and downward over the sea.
To starboard is the lounge, writing room and lobby, also with promenade. Between are the 25 double-berthed cabins.

Modern Conveniences Provided

Each of them is roughly the size of a sleeping compartment on a European train, equipped with hot and cold running water and wardrobe. They have no windows, but are ventilated by a modern system which assures the changing of the air 10 times an hour.

There is an electric elevator,
used to expedite loading of freight and passengers, a bar and a smoking room, first of its kind on any German airship. The use of helium for part of the ship's gas has made this possible for the first time. The smoking room in addition is "insulated" from the rest of the ship and entered through a passage so constructed as to assure that no sparks can escape.

The entire ship is furnished with super-light metal furniture. The construction is so light that an armchair can be lifted with one hand. The hollow legs of some of the tables are used as ventilators.

Above the passenger quarters in the dim cavernous maze of skeleton steel of the body are the gas

cells which give the ship its lifting power. Each is double, first an outer helium cell to provide against danger of fire, and inside a hydrogen cell. Hydrogen has a greater lifting capacity than helium; in addition, it is cheaper, and can thus be dumped toward the end of a voyage when the ship's load of fuel, water and foodstuffs has been lightened and it is necessary to deflate the bags.

The ship is covered with a special cotton-wool sheath, which in turn has received several coats of

New to Feature Ann Harding and Yacht Boys

Ann Emerson, Youthful Star, to Get Chance Saturday; Many Other Features Planned

Ann Harding, dramatic star of the screen, will bring one of Hollywood's younger actresses to the microphone, with her in Chateau on Saturday, April 25. The young actress is Lillian Emerson, who will make her film break through a radio performance, and they will play roles in a scene from the Broadway success, "Holiday." Other guests of Smith Ballou in this broadcast over a WEAF-NBC network at 9:30 p. m. (EST) will be Gloria Swanson in the role of a singer; the Yacht Club Boys; and two basketball players recently picked for the American Olympic squad to compete in Berlin next Summer. The players are Frank Lubin and Ed Knowles.

Miss Harding, as the star of "Holiday," makes one of her rare appearances in radio drama. She was seen on the Broadway stage in such hits as "A Woman Disputed" and "The Trial of Mary Dugan." In the last few years she has devoted all her time to film work. With her is Lillian Emerson who came to the attention of Hollywood producers through the medium of radio drama.

Miss Emerson received an important assignment as Clark Gable's leading woman in the Monday night Radio Theatre program last fall and within a few months she signed to a movie contract. Gloria Swanson, one of the biggest stars of pictures in the days of the "silents" and later a star of the talkies, will be presented as a singer in her Chateau engagement. The Yacht Club Boys are well known and night club performers in New York whose popularity got them a film job. A vocal quartet, specializing in novelty numbers, they will present a group of tunes in this style.

Lubin and Knowles are captain and forward, respectively, of the Madison Square Garden basketball team which recently competed in the finals at Madison Square Garden to pick an Olympic team to go to Berlin next Summer. Lubin and Knowles were among the players chosen for the squad and they will be interviewed by Ballou in Chateau.

Ballou will be heard in popular tunes in addition to introducing the guest stars and orchestra music will be furnished by Victor Young's band.

Edmund Pottocks: Speaking of Hamilton, when the Hylton-Pottocks vacation Alec will make a personal concert tour including Vancouver, B. C., and England. Alec also may appear with the Chicago Symphony. Dick Stabile, Bernie's sax prodigy, is again in the loose with a band of his own. Abe Lyman, for six weeks educating the College Innners of Chicago to the proper dance rhythm (Abe started years ago from Chi), is allowing his NBC Waltz Time and CBS Melodiana shows to be carried on from NYawk by a secondary Lyman unit, thus avoiding moose union arguments. Joe Sanders, recently returned to Chi's Black-

INVITED STARS TOP 3,000 PENN RELAY ENTRIES

67 Events in 2-Day Event;
Jesse Owens in Feature
100-Meter Race

PHILADELPHIA, April 23.—(UP)—A galaxy of some 3,000 athletes will converge on Philadelphia today—eager for the start of the 42nd annual relay carnival of the University of Pennsylvania. From all along the Atlantic seaboard, the Middle West and the South will come athletes who represent some of the finest universities and colleges, prep and high schools in the land. Drastic changes in the program have attracted a more select group of college stars, and at the same time met the challenge of Midwestern Drake University, whose relay carnival has been underminding the Penn Classic in recent years.

The 1936 Penn Relays are composed of some 67 events—some 15 less than in other years. All feature events have been retained, however, with the exception of the 110-meter hurdles. This race was eliminated to give greater prominence to the 80-yard shuttle hurdle, one of the most popular events of the entire relays.

The important variations in the relay program include the elimination of the open 100-meter dash and the substitution of a 100-meter invitation event. This important Olympic-bearing event has been "saved until last." It gives promise of being one of the most vital track contests of the pre-Olympic season. The nation's best dash men were invited—and only those may compete. The entry list includes Jesse Owens, Ohio State flash, and Temple University's Eulace Peacock, who shattered records in the 100 meters and the broad jump last year.

Peacock clipped the century in 10.6 seconds. He has given notice that he will lower that time, and he probably will as his chief rival—Owens—will be pounding the cinders beside him.

Saturday Big Day
The program will be divided into 22 events on Friday afternoon and 45 on Saturday. Officials expect to complete the relays before 5 p. m.—an hour and 20 minutes earlier than in 1935.

Athletes will compete on a new track, built since last year at a cost of $6,500.

The track has been pronounced by H. Jamison Swarts, manager of the carnival, as one of the finest and fastest in the country. For exactly 40 years the old track served as a footing for such great stars as Ted Meredith, Don Lippincott, Harold Lever, Nate Cartmell, Louis C. Madeira, 3rd, Wallace McCurdy, Bill Carr, Guy Haskins, Earl Eby and numerous other Quaker athletes.

Under supervision of Lawson Robertson and experts, the new track was made of six inches of cinders, six inches of rough cinders and six inches of top dressing. The combination used for the top dressing has been declared the "very best."

Relay officials have ordered numerous restrictions in entrants in order to speed up the program and give it more prominence.

College broad jumpers must have made a mark of 22 feet before entering that event in the relays. Time restrictions were ordered in effect in relay events. Several were eliminated entirely.

Rivalry to Be Keener
Officials believe that the restrictions and elimination of some events will meet the objections of previous years to overcrowding on the track. Competition will be keener.

Before America was discovered, cotton was cultivated independently in both the Old World and the New, but today the world's cotton industry depends mainly on a native American cotton.

About This And That In Many Sports

Four Golf Meets

Four golf matches for Circleville's team have been scheduled with Columbus East and West high schools—The first will be April 30 against West on a course chosen by the Columbus school; the second brings a contest against East on May 5 somewhere in Columbus—On May 7 West comes here and May 15, East returns the Tigers' earlier journey.

Ironton Wants Game

Ironton wanted to play basketball here next winter, but Faculty Manager E. E. Reger turned down a request because the river city wanted too much cash.

No Softball Loop

Unless someone with a lot of energy and faith in human nature comes forward pretty soon it looks very much like there will be no softball league.

Patty Youngest

Eighteen-year-old Patty Berg, member of the Curtis cup team in vading England, is the youngest competitor ever chosen for international golf. Bobby Jones and Jess Sweetser were 20 when they first played on foreign soil. Credit Phil Brubaker, fighting parson of the Pacific coast, with some sparkling repartee. Matchmaker Jimmy Johnston of Madison Square Garden asked him to name the opponent he preferred for his debut in New York. The reply was "Braddock." asked how he'd like to meet Leroy Haynes, Negro who recently knocked out Camara. Brubaker replied, "Not yet—I don't think I have had enough experience to

DRUGGISTS WIN TEN PIN TITLE

Oils Lose Three as Mykrantz Edges Chevrolets, Coca Colas

The Mykrantz Drug store bowling team won the city championship, Wednesday evening, by knocking off the Circleville Oil team three straight games.

Low scores featured the evening's rolling though the drugs managed to knock off a small margin in each fray.

The Mykrantz outfit came from far behind to overtake the leaders in the city loop. Early in the season they rolled good scores and topped the league in total pins but couldn't win consistently. Then the worm started to turn and they were successful.

The Chevrolets, league-leaders until the last game of the season, tied with the Coca Colas for second and third places.

Lou Vining, captain of the Mykrantz team, led the league in individual scoring.

Kelly Petillo to Enter Speedway Contest Again

Italian, Winner Last Year, Files His Application; Victory Sweet After Numerous Early Reversals

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., April 23.—Kelly Petillo, doughty little Italian who surmounted every obstacle to win last year's classic, may drive again.

For the last several months "grape-vine" rumors said that the "king of the ridge" would forsake the roaring road for the quiet of a fruit farm which he had purchased in his native California with last year's winnings. It was definitely known that he had approached other drivers with the idea of interesting them in piloting his victory car.

But this week Petillo's official entry was received in the office of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway and Kelly named himself as driver of his own car on May 30.

May Change Mind

This does not bind Petillo to actual driving because he may make another choice up until the time the car is ready to qualify but the "chauffeur" who participates in the elimination test must start the mount in the race.

Adverse circumstances whetted Kelly's appetite for sweet victory last year. On his first attempt to qualify he broke all two-man car records in negotiating the 25 miles, averaging nearly 122 miles per hour but he consumed too much gasoline and the test was thrown out. Allowed three attempts, Petillo threw a rod through the side of his motor on his second trial and it seemed that all of his efforts were in vain. New parts had to be shipped by plane from California and, working day and night, the crippled charger was finally rolled onto the track late in the afternoon of the final qualifying day and Petillo nosed into the one of the back rows in the line-up of 33 cars.

Kelly lost little time in working toward the front and was running eighth place in twenty-five laps. In seventy laps he had taken the lead, which he held, with the exception of a couple of temporary surrenders occasioned by necessary pit stops.

PURDUE 11 DROPS 'CATS TO TANGLE WITH OHIO TEAM

LAFAYETTE, Ind., April 23.—(UP)—Ohio University, one of the nation's few unbeaten teams last fall, will replace Northwestern University on the 1936 Purdue University football schedule. Athletic Director Noble E. Klizer has announced.

The Boilermakers, who finished third in the Conference race last year, will meet five Western Conference rivals next season, including Wisconsin, Minnesota, Chicago, Iowa and Indiana.

Quebec Wants "Idea" Man

MONTREAL.—The Quebec government is looking for "a man with ideas" to solve one of its most pressing problems. A special niche in the hall of fame, Premier Taschereau said, awaits a man who can show the government how to increase its revenue without increasing taxes.

Remember When?

The Historic Logan Elm was placed under control of the Ohio State Archaeological society.

On May 6, 1912, Mrs. Mary A. Wallace of Chillicothe transferred to Mrs. Mary Jones, president of the Pickaway-co Historical society, approximately four and a half acres of land upon which the celebrated Logan Elm and Boggs monument are located.

At the time of the land transfer the state society agreed to accept the property and convert it into a small public park. The presentation to the state society was made in October at a large public meeting attended by a delegation of Indians.

Celebrations have been held at the park every year since October.

FARMERS OF OHIO TO PLANT LARGE ACREAGE IN 1936

TABACCO, CORN CROP INCREASE SEEN IN SPRING

State Survey Shows Potatoes and Soybeans Likely to Be Reduced

COLUMBUS, April 22.—Farmers in the United States are planning to plant substantial increases of most crops over the acreages harvested in 1935, but these increased acres are only approximately enough to bring the plantings back to normal from the level to which drought and crop control programs took them. The estimate on plantings is based on reports to the United States Department of Agriculture from 42,000 farmers in all parts of the country.

The reports from Ohio show that farmers of this state intend to follow the example of all farmers in most crops. They expect to plant in Ohio 29 per cent more tobacco, 5 per cent more corn, and 3 per cent more hay crops. Ohio farmers differ in planting intentions as far as the oat crop is concerned because, while farmers in the United States state they will plant 2 per cent more oats, they probably will be 10 per cent fewer of oats planted in Ohio.

Huge Corn Increase

Farmers in the United States will plant about 99,000,000 acres of corn this year, which is an increase of more than 6,000,000 acres from 1935. Ohio farmers will have about 160,000 more acres of corn than was harvested last year. Another increase of this size in acreage in Ohio will take the area planted in the United States and also in Ohio are potatoes and soybeans. The indicated reduction for potatoes is 3 per cent in the United States and 10 per cent in Ohio; for soybeans, the reductions are 11 per cent for the whole country and 5 per cent in Ohio.

Plantings of spring wheat in Ohio have been very small in the last few years and there is no indication of any increase this year; but, out in the spring wheat section, farmers are expected to plant 25 per cent more spring wheat than last year. That will mean a lot of bushels of wheat if the weather conditions permit a normal yield to be produced.

Oats and barley are still in dispute on Ohio farms. The 1928 average harvest of oats in this state was 1,795,000 acres; last year Ohio farmers harvested 1,269,000 acres of oats, and the expected harvest this year is 1,142,000 acres. There will be 653,000 fewer acres of oats harvested in Ohio this year than were harvested in the acreage year of the period five to ten years ago. Farmers of the state have almost abandoned barley; the average from 1928 to 1932 was 141,000 acres but the harvest last year was only 17,000 acres and there is to be about the same number of acres in 1936 as last year.

Onions Gain Favor
Onions appear to be fast gaining in favor. The last year's plantings of this crop were the largest on record and a further increase of 8 per cent in the United States is expected, but Ohio onion producers will plant fewer acres of the crop than last year. Commercial plantings of cabbage for the entire country will be increased 21 per cent but the plantings will be increased only 8 per cent in Ohio.

Most of the asphalt in the United States is manufactured from petroleum.

Miniature Training Plane Used to Make Flying Safe In Worst Kind of Weather

Pilots Are Taught to Fly Entirely By Radio and Instrument in New Device
at U. S. Bureau of Air Commerce

Ward D. Davis,
instructor of instrument flying
for the air commerce bureau.

The Link Trainer. Pilots are taught to fly by instruments and radio alone so that weather conditions will have little effect on the handling of their ships.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Flying

"in the soup" will be duck soup little blind flying practice with to pilots after they have had a the bureau of air commerce's new apparatus to teach instrument control.

"Soupy" weather—the kind in which the fog can't be cut with a knife and the ceiling registers zero—has long been a hazard to safe flying. This miniature training plane is the air commerce bureau's most recent and successful attempt to make flying safe in any weather.

Sensitive

Technically known as the Link advanced instrument and radio pilot trainer, this little gadget looks like a baby airplane without a motor and can simulate any flight situation except inverted flying. Equipped with radio control and every sort of flight instrument, it is 35 per cent more sensitive in control than any normal airplane.

In the Link trainer pilots are taught to fly by instrument and radio alone, so that visibility and weather conditions will affect them very little in the handling of their ships.

The trainer was designed by E. A. Link, president of the Link Aviation Devices, Binghamton, N. Y., last October. It is installed on the seventh floor of the Department of Commerce building and can be used by any licensed pilot.

Ward D. Davis, instructor of instrument flying for the air commerce bureau, sits behind a desk across the room from the Link trainer and talks to the student in the trainer by radio.

Realistic

The pilot, inside the black-hooded cockpit, feels cut off from everything except the messages coming to him through his earphones. He seems suspended in space with only the instrument panel in front of him to serve as guide. Davis' voice in his ear instructs him to go through various maneuvers, trying to keep the air speed and bank and turn indicators always registering the same.

The pilot touches the rudder bar a little too hard. The trainer gives a lurch; the bank and turn indicator jumps to one side; the air speed soars. Davis' voice in his ear barks, "Pull your nose up! Keep that ball in the center of your bank indicator! You're flying an airplane. You're losing altitude. If you keep this up, you'll crash!"

Pilots who have tried the half hour's instruction in the Link trainer say it is more grueling than any flying they've ever done previously.

Objectives

By using the trainer, the bureau of air commerce believes that the time and expense of training pilots for instrument flying will be greatly reduced. There is also a greater possibility of checking pilots in their blind flying ability.

All members of the bureau personnel are given instruction in the trainer.

The University of Minnesota is the most recent purchaser of a Link trainer. It will be used in connection with its department of aeronautical engineering and the University Flying club.

THE STORE FOR MEN AND BOYS

"Of course it feels different, Dad...
it is different!"

It took more than just good performance to win over 2,500,000 Ford V-8 fans in less than four years. It's an entirely different kind of performance that did it! It's the V-8 engine, first and foremost. The smoother flow of its 85 horsepower. Its pick-up in traffic. Its easy pull in the open and up the hills. For you can't expect any less modern engine to feel like a V-8. And you don't find another V-8 below $1645.

Then there's riding comfort. Ford springbase is 123"—almost a foot longer than wheelbase. You'll quickly feel the edge this gives a Ford on cars near its size and weight. Next, there's a type of chassis in the Ford not found anywhere else in the world today. That's why a Ford "keeps its feet" so remarkably on turns and over rough roads.

Why not try these advantages today? Before you decide on any new car—get the "V-8 feel" that put the Ford first among all cars last year!
